Jerusalem Post Reporter Foreign Minister Abba Eban told the Cabinet yesterday that U.N. envoy Gunnar Jarring had nothing new to offer when he met Israel's Ambassador Yosef Tekoah in New York on Friday.

Saudi and Libyan aid for Uganda

KAMPALA. — Saudi Arabia and Libya will provide Uganda an interest-free loan of $10m. repayable over six years after a four-year grace period for development projects.

The radio said the Libyan Arab Foreign Bank would set up a subsidiary in Kampala, which would be 49 per cent owned by the Uganda government.

The bank would have a paid-up capital of about $8.5m. of which the Libyan Arab Foreign Bank in Tripoli would subscribe $7.5m. and the Uganda government the remainder, it added.

The radio said the bank had agreed to purchase shares in the state-owned Uganda Development Corporation worth $4.5m. and that it would also extend "medium" and long-term loans for development of industry and tourism.

The Libyan government would participate, through the bank, in the financing of tea, tobacco and sugar development schemes here, it said. The radio said a Libyan economic mission would arrive here early this week to appraise development projects for possible participation.

Amin slates statement on other citizens

KAMPALA (AP). — President Idi Amin announced here yesterday his government would issue a statement today which would "affect" citizens of other nationalities in addition to the estimated 40,000 British Asians Uganda is expelling.

Amin made the announcement in an informal speech at the end of a motorcycle race meeting here. Referring to Saturday night's announcement on the expulsion of British Asians, Amin said his decision was "final" and would not be changed.

Amin said his Cabinet had been meeting throughout yesterday to discuss the affair. After its meeting ended last night he intended to summon British High Commissioner Richard Slater to inform him officially of the government's intentions.

Spassky wins 11th as Fischer resigns

REYKJAVIK (Reuter). — Boris Spassky, attacking strongly, beat Bobby Fischer in the 11th game of their world championship chess match here last night. The reigning champion climbed back from a three-point deficit, and his victory narrowed Fischer's lead to 6½-4½.

Fischer was forced to play defensively throughout the game as Spassky pressed right from the opening. The American, despite a resourceful attempt to escape from the net closing round him, was forced to resign after Spassky's 31st move.

Fischer still has a fine lead that will take strenuous efforts to overhaul. But the 24-game match has come alive again — as evidenced by the wild applause in the hall when Fischer resigned.

There was a strange silence as Fischer, looking pale, came out and entered his car, driven by his second, Father William Lombardy. It took Fischer a long time to find his safety belt.

When he had gone, Spassky came out to resounding applause. He was smoking a cigarette but did not smile and continued to look grave despite the continuing hand-clapping.

The Russian, forced to make a do-or-die effort last night to keep anywhere near contention in the championship, took advantage of the fact that Fischer's queen was not only decentralized but also in danger of being captured. Fischer lost his queen finally on the 25th move. But it was already apparent

Cairo official: Soviet pull out nearly finished

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter A senior Egyptian official was yesterday quoted by the Cairo press as declaring that the withdrawal of Soviet military advisers and experts from Egypt "has been completed."

Mr. Marei himself also declined to elaborate on the scope of the Soviet pullout. His remarks nevertheless sparked off further speculation on the extent of the withdrawal, which is said to have involved as much as 15,000 Russians.

One estimate said that less than 2,000 Soviets, classified as "instructors," would be staying in Egypt for a period already fixed by President Sadat.

In the absence of concrete information, there have been contradicting versions also over what material the Russians had been taking out of Egypt. An agency report from Cairo said that the Russians were taking with them sophisticated equipment including Mig-23 fighter-bombers and advanced electronic items.

Subsequently, the paper said, the leading figures of the various Syrian Communist groups were summoned to persuade them to reconcile their rival blocs. "An-Nahar" reported the Soviets to have urged the Syrian Communists to unify their ranks, implying that Moscow was seeking to recruit the Syrian Communists to exert pressure on Assad.

meanwhile, Beirut's leading "An-Nahar" newspaper said yesterday that Syria had fully supported Egypt's ouster of the Russians but that Damascus would not contemplate the dismissal of the 2,500 Russians in Syria before expiry of their terms of service.

In a dispatch from Damascus, "An-Nahar" said that Syrian President Hafez Assad had already declined to renew contracts of some Soviet experts who had concluded their service.

"An-Nahar" added that Assad had last week held three meetings with the Soviet ambassador in Damascus, Nour Eddine Mohieddinov, in what was described as an atmosphere of secrecy.

Soviet-Jewish writers' deaths to be marked

A public assembly to mark the 20th anniversary of the murder under Stalin of Jewish writers in Russia will take place tomorrow at Jerusalem's Beit Ha'am in the presence of the President and the Prime Minister. The assembly is sponsored by the World Jewish Congress.

The murder of these writers, the spiritual avant-garde of the Jewish community in Eastern Europe, marked the start of the official policy of Jewish cultural annihilation which has persisted to the present day.

Tomorrow's assembly is meant not only to mark the date of their murder but to encourage Soviet Jews in their struggle for the right to emigrate to Israel.

Meir denies loan made to Elite: Strike enters its third week

Jerusalem Post Staff

In a special statement at yesterday's Cabinet session, Premier Golda Meir termed as "without foundation" statements attributed to Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon that the Government had given the Elite factory a IL500,000 grant in 1970.

The strike in the Elite concern goes into its third week today.

Mrs. Meir said the Secretary-General's statement had attracted wide publicity and she therefore saw it as her duty to state clearly and emphatically that it was untrue.

The denial was issued by the Premier in the absence abroad of Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir.

It is understood that Mr. Ben-Aharon did not accuse the Government of giving the company the money outright, but of granting the company a large loan at three per cent less than the usual rate of interest, an act which would have saved the company an estimated IL500,000.

(At a Histadrut Executive meeting last Thursday, Mr. Ben-Aharon said Elite received a loan of IL4.5m. from the Government's Bank for Industrial Development, at nine per cent interest, to help it buy the Lieber concern. That, Mr. Ben-Aharon said, was in 1970, when Elite was the most liquid company in the country, and the loan was like a gift of IL500,000 in the savings on interest over the usual rate.)

Sapir when the Finance Minister expressed surprise at what he thought to be misrepresentation of the facts by Mr. Ben-Aharon.

A five-man delegation of the Histadrut Central Committee, headed by Deputy Secretary-General Yeruham Meshel, yesterday visited the striking workers at the Elite plant in Ramat Gan. The concern's 2,000 men were out for the 14th day.

In the District Court here, Judge Hanna Evenor said she would announce her decision today on the strikers' application to cancel the temporary injunction that forbids them to interfere with removal of goods from Elite warehouses. Judge

Evenor rejected the strikers' claim that this issue was properly one for the Labour courts.

Elite general manager Aba Fromenko told The Post he was not negotiating because he had nothing to offer the workers that he had not offered before the walkout, which amounted to benefits of 40 per cent. At stake was not only the future of Elite, but of industry generally, he said. The argument that because Elite was a monopoly it could pay more was false. "Quite the contrary is true — a monopoly has a responsibility to the customer which a competing industry does not have," Mr. Fromenko said.

August payments not affected National Insurance Ins't struck by 1,500-man staff

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The 1,500 employees of the National Insurance Institute in all parts of the country went out on strike yesterday.

The public will not be immediately affected, except for those receiving one-time payments, such as new mothers and victims of work accidents. Current cheques for the month of August have already been prepared, the Institute spokesman said. September cheques for large families will not be made out until August 20. If the strike lasts more than a few days arrangements will be made with banks to enable the public to make their insurance payments there, he added.

The strikers claim that management has not kept its promise to bring Institute salaries and fringe benefits into line with those of income tax employees. The strikers demand unlimited overtime pay; awarding overtime pay to senior employees; a IL200 yearly clothing allowance; and absorption by the Institute of the 3.5 per cent monthly pay deduction for Institute membership, as is done by Bank Leumi.

They also demand a 150 in the terms to be offered about 150 workers with long service who are to be reassigned to other jobs following an efficiency move within the Institute.

A representative of the strikers, Mr. Shmuel Peled, told The Post yesterday that the workers have full Histadrut support and that their present action follows a one-day warning strike last May.

Mr. Reuven Wolkow, Deputy Director-General of the Institute, said the strike came as a complete surprise to management and that it is illegal. "Official strike notices only reached us yesterday morning, several hours after the strike had broken out," he complained. "In any case, several points had already been settled and we had till the 26th of this month to reach full agreement," he added.

Urge revival of public tax assessments

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — A proposal to revive the practice of publishing income tax assessments of self-employed persons was debated yesterday by the Histadrut Central Committee. The tax authorities dropped the practice many years ago in the face of vociferous criticism from many quarters.

The proposal was submitted by the Histadrut's constitutional department, headed by Mr. Zvi Nathanson of Mapam. Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon supported the proposal, saying that public exposure of who pays how much income tax would encourage more honest declarations of income "in certain circles."

Mr. Nathanson said that in 1971/72 wage earners paid proportionately more income tax and self-employed persons paid proportionately less. This indicated, he said, that tax evasion in some quarters may be on the increase.

The proposal, which was opposed by Mr. Hillel Seidel (Independent Liberals) and Mr. Amos Dagan (Alignment), will be voted on by the Central Committee at its next meeting.

Dismissal on 'formal notice'

The National Labour Court, in rejecting an appeal by the Jerusalem Municipality, has ruled that an employer's "letter of intent" to dismiss an employee is not sufficient; the date of dismissal can only be fixed when the employee has received formal notice.

In May 1971, a municipal employee, Mrs. Sara Bezael, received a letter from the city's personnel manager informing her that she would be dropped from the payroll in two months' time.

A municipal council meeting the next month decided on her dismissal. She was informed on July 16 that her employment would terminate at the end of the month.

She contested the time of dismissal and took the case to the District Labour Court which recognized the validity of the second, formal, notice. This decision has now been upheld by the National Court. (Itm)

Face-lifting for border point at Rosh Hanikra

NAHARIYA. — Extensive "face-lifting" carried out recently at the Rosh Hanikra border checkpoint has given rise to speculation that Israel and Lebanon are about to establish normal tourist relations.

Since 1948 the only persons allowed to pass through Rosh Hanikra have been clergymen, students, U.N. and Red Cross officials and diplomats.

Tourism Minister Moshe Kol said recently that he hoped ordinary tourists as well would soon be able to pass through Rosh Hanikra.

'Escape artist' Farkas in trouble again

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TIBERIAS. — Nahman Farkas, the 38-year-old "escape artist," has fled again, this time from his "home" in the caves overlooking Rosh Pina. He appears to have learned of the fact that the Police were after him when hashish is processed, a field he allegedly planted in the wadi near his cave yielded enough plants to load a jeep. Growing the plant is an offence.

Until last week Farkas lived as a recluse in the area.

Farkas, who gained notoriety after several jail breaks, was sentenced to nine years in 1961 for robbery. In his last and most famous escape, he made his way to Egypt and returned 18 months later to be given an additional four-year sentence. One-third of his sentence was later remitted on grounds of good behavior and he was released in December 1968.

Last week a resident of Rosh Pina was arrested for growing hemp in his courtyard and processing it into hashish at his home. A large quantity of dried hemp leaves and smoking utensils were confiscated.

M.K.s charge liquidation of small factions

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The three main parties are seeking to legislate the smaller Knesset factions out of existence, the two M.K.s of the Free Centre party charged here yesterday.

Mr. Eliezer Shostak and Mr. Shmuel Tamir told the Press their group will initiate a meeting of the smaller Knesset factions comprising 19 M.K.s representing 250,000 voters, with the aim of fighting "the plots" of the Alignment, Gahal and the N.R.P.

They cited the proposal to table a bill for financing parties out of taxpayers' monies which they claimed would discriminate against the smaller factions. It would involve IL20m-IL30m. a year of public monies, they said. They will now table their own motion, calling for proper control of the parties by the State Comptroller and the law courts.

The Free Centre party wants financing of parties to be based on election results alone, plus a bank guarantee on account of advance payments on election eve. They also want to change the allocation of seats so that no party will be apportioned according to size of parties and not to volume of surplus. They also want fairer political coverage on radio and TV.

Another proposal calls for keeping the minimum ceiling down to 2.5 per cent of the poll for admittance of a list to the Knesset. They held that the proposal would be formed by the three main parties for raising the ceiling of the minimum percentage was an arbitrary measure also aimed at liquidating the smaller parties.

N.R.P. Youth Circle M.K.s Zevulun Hammer and Yehuda Ben Meir last night reacted to the Free Centre charges of a plot between the three main parties, saying that no such proposals had ever been formally discussed in official N.R.P. forums.

They said they opposed reappportioning of the surplus votes in an undemocratic manner, and were very much against raising the ceiling on the minimum required for a Knesset list to master admittance to the house.

Eliav hits settlement in administered areas

BONN (AP). — Mr. Arye (Lyova) Eliav M.K. yesterday criticized Government plans for Jewish settlement in the territories. The self-acknowledged "super-dove" told a meeting of senior members of the Labour Party that "the government is utterly confused in its settlement priorities." For him the first priority was settling the Negev and then Galilee.

He attacked the plan to settle Rafah in very sharp terms: "It was carried out from the beginning without a head, minus hands and feet." Mr. Eliav was introducing his new book "Eretz Ha-zvi" wherein he spells out his programme.

Two to be tried in Bonn for killing Jews

BONN (AP). — A 63-year-old Bonn laborer, Oskar Baecker, faces trial for helping to exterminate 3,000 Jews in Poland and personally murdering nine persons, State Prosecutor Dieter Inself announced on Friday.

He said Baecker is expected to stand trial in a Bonn court before the end of the year on charges of murder and assisting in murder, along with Georg Weis, 62, who helped execute 20 Jews.

Shmuel Toledano under fire for criticizing Meir on Bir'im

By MARK SEGAL
Jerusalem Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Senior government sources have reacted angrily to public criticism of government policy on Bir'im and Bir'im by the Prime Minister's Adviser on Arab Affairs, Mr. Shmuel Toledano. These circles described Mr. Toledano's statement to the Beit Brenner club on Friday as "completely and utterly unprecedented."

The fact that Mr. Toledano had chosen such a widely publicized forum for his criticism of the Prime Minister was regarded with gravity and "as quite unseemly for a government official." It was pointed out that apart from the question of good taste, Mr. Toledano was acting against the rules of the tabshir — the code governing conduct of civil servants.

Some government sources are now going as far as to say that if Mr. Toledano found his position so difficult and was so upset that the Prime Minister had chosen to ignore his advice in this case he had an obvious choice open to him of resigning from his position.

Labour Party sources here said Mr. Toledano was understood to have explained that he crystallized his position on Bir'im and Bir'im while in close contact with Deputy Premier Yigal Alon who was acting as mediator during Mrs. Meir's absence abroad in June for the Socialist International Congress in Vienna.

These same sources noted that Mr.

Alon's aides had seen to it that the Deputy Premier's dissenting views on Bir'im and Bir'im had gained wide publicity. They also noted his close association with the organizers of the writers' group that met with Mrs. Meir last week.

In a related development the Jewish-Druse committee of the Labour Party Youth Division yesterday called for Mr. Toledano's resignation. The committee charged that Mr. Toledano was unfit to hold his position because of what it termed his maladministration of policy among the Druse community and his failure to implement government policy advocating the integration of the Druse in the general administration. Instead of encouraging progress in the Druse community, Mr. Toledano preferred to lean on the traditional class for the sake of convenience.

The committee chairman, Mr. Israel Brekhi, wrote to Premier Meir on his committee's behalf complaining against Mr. Toledano.

Meir to meet Raya

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Premier Golda Meir will meet with Greek Catholic Archbishop Joseph Raya this week in order to discuss the Government's decision not to allow the Berk and Bir'im settlers to return to their pre-1948 homes. The meeting follows a request for an interview from the prelate, conveyed to Mrs. Meir by letter.

Y.S. Shapiro honoured by Municipality of J'lem

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Former Justice Minister Y'acov Yisrael Shapiro was awarded the Jerusalem Medalion by Mayor Teddy Kolek last night at a special ceremony attended by Prime Minister Golda Meir.

Mr. Kolek praised Mr. Shapiro's role in the unification of the city and the creation of conditions enabling peaceful coexistence. It was Mr. Shapiro, he said, who had promulgated the historic law three weeks after the Six Day War uniting the two halves of Jerusalem.

He noted that Mr. Shapiro headed the Ministerial Committee on Jerusalem when it made such crucial decisions as expunging the Western Wall, permitting the archaeological dig outside the Temple Mount and expropriating the tracts of land upon which the new housing developments since the Six Day War.

The expropriation, said Mr. Kolek, was carried out with a sensitivity about the relative importance of different tracts of land to the Arab population. Were it not for this sensitivity, said the mayor, the outcry over the expropriation would have been much more serious. The former minister had followed two principles, Mr. Kolek said — that Jerusalem was the eternal capital of the Jews and that it was a city holy to three faiths.

Mr. Shapiro recalled that Mr. Kolek had asked him in June, 1967 about the legal aspects of clearing the area in front of the Western Wall. From the point of view of law, Mr. Shapiro told him, it wasn't quite in order. But in order to bring the Wall back from its exile, he said, it was best that the Municipality move quickly and ask questions later.

The former minister said that in 1964 he had recommended that construction of a new Knesset building be deferred until it could be built in the Old City.

The ceremony was held in the presence of the Council, Mrs. Meir and 500 guests.

Stained glass windows for Jerusalem City Council

By MERR BONNEN

Jerusalem's Municipal Council Chamber was yesterday enhanced by six large stained-glass windows designed by Avigdor Arikha, a well-known Israeli artist who makes his home in Paris. The windows, each two by three metres, were made by the artist at the Isely works in Freiburg, West Germany.

Originally the suggestion of interior architect Dora Gad, the windows were ordered by Mayor Teddy Kolek through the Jerusalem Foundation in 1969. Most of the cost was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Laub of Antwerp, who attended an inaugural ceremony at the Municipality yesterday morning. The total cost of the windows was not disclosed but it is known that the costs in Germany and the shipping came to some $10,000.

Each window is executed in only three basic colours and no more than six colours are used throughout, though effects of shading are achieved. Each set of three windows constitutes a complementary unit. Within each window there are straight frames cutting the design, but the leads are used as drawing and do not necessarily define or interrupt the flow of colour. Arikha's collage designs for the windows are now on show at the Israel Museum.

Several of the windows were damaged during the mounting here and Arikha is patently unhappy with the attitude of some municipal officials who not only profess bafflement at the abstract designs, but who keep the lights turned up in the Municipal Chamber. In order to appreciate the windows, Councilors would have to enter the chamber in the dark and use only their desk lamps.

The large windows are mounted on rails which enable them to be slid behind the intervening wall three basic colours and no more should danger threaten.

The ticket: McGovern-Shriver

WASHINGTON (UPI). — George McGovern chose R. Sargent Shriver, a Kennedy in-law who has never sought public office, to be his new running mate in the campaign against President Nixon.

McGovern told a nation-wide radio and television audience late Saturday of his choice of Shriver, former Peace Corps and anti-poverty director, U.S. Ambassador and brother-in-law of Senator Edward Kennedy, several hours after Senator Edmund Muskie turned down an offer to join the ticket.

Shriver's public and private lives, said McGovern, "have been marked by a special dedication to the needs of the poor and to those who are victims of racial injustice. I am confident of his ability to serve this country as Vice-President of the U.S."

Harvey Thierman, the Pennsylvania Democratic Chairman.

"I think it's a great choice for California and assures us now of a real viable presidential-vice-presidential team," said Charles Manatt, the California party chairman, who cited Shriver's likely appeal to organized labor as well as to long-standing Kennedy supporters. Similar praise came from party leaders in Michigan, Wisconsin, Massachusetts and Texas.

A few hours after Muskie turned McGovern down by telephone, a half-dozen secret service agents arrived at Shriver's home in the Kennedy compound at Hyannisport to provide protection for the newly designated candidate.

McGovern thus ended nearly three weeks of controversy over his first running mate, Senator Thomas Eagleton. Eagleton's belated disclosure of past psychiatric treatments forced him to withdraw from the ticket last Monday and at least four other Democrats — including Muskie — rejected McGovern's offers to fill the vacancy before Shriver accepted on Saturday.

Eagleton said Shriver was an "excellent choice" and that he would do everything to help elect the ticket. "He'll be a bright, energetic,

Shriver: A Kennedy man with his own identity

R. Sargent Shriver is a Kennedy family in-law who has established his own personal and political identity in distinct fashion.

He was the only member of the Kennedy clan who continued on good footing with Lyndon Johnson when he assumed the presidency following the assassination of Shriver's brother-in-law John Kennedy. At age 56, Shriver has been out of the public spotlight in recent years but he has always been counted in as one of the Kennedy political inner circle.

When he first came to Washington in 1961 to serve as first director of the Peace Corps, Shriver was known merely as the rather handsome husband of Eunice Kennedy. Eight years later, he left the government recognized as a skillful administrator who has headed the Peace Corps, the war on poverty and had served as Mr. Johnson's Ambassador to France.

A descendant of a signer of the Bill of Rights, Shriver was born to wealth at Westminster, Maryland, in 1915, but his banker father lost his money in the 1929 crash and hard-working campaigner and an excellent Vice-President," Eagleton said. Shriver and Edward Kennedy watched McGovern make his announcement on television at the home of Kennedy's mother, Rose, at the family compound at Hyannisport, Massachusetts.

The Democratic National Committee meets tomorrow to ratify McGovern's choice, but most party officials made it clear they were delighted. "An excellent choice," said

Two Israelis in Tanzania shot 'trying to flee'

DAR-ES-SALAAM (Reuter). — Two young Israelis shot dead in a restricted area here six weeks ago tried to flee in their car when challenged to identify themselves, an inquest has been told.

A Tanzanian police officer on duty at the time told a coroner on Saturday that a sergeant opened fire with a sub-machinegun at the car in a bid to puncture the tyres. About seven bullets hit the bodies of the two Israelis, Hillel Ben-Haim and Eytan Daskal, both 23, he added.

The officer, Sergeant Buhaza, said at about 8 p.m. on June 23 he saw a car enter the restricted area and approach to within about 60 metres of the guards.

He added: "We then shouted 'Who is coming there?' The driver switched on full lights, made a U-turn and attempted to flee."

The inquest was adjourned until August 12.

Shriver made his way through Yale on scholarships and part-time jobs. After a brief stint with a New York law firm, he entered the navy in World War II, emerging as a lieutenant commander.

His first connection with the Kennedys came at the end of the war when he was hired by Joseph Kennedy to edit for publication the letters of his oldest son, Joseph Jr., who had been killed on an air mission over the English Channel. He told the elder Kennedy that Joe's papers weren't suitable for publication, and, far from being offended, Kennedy asked the young editor to go to work for him.

In 1953 Shriver married Eunice Kennedy and the couple plunged into the round of social and civic activities that had already become a habit with Shriver. The Shriverts maintain residences now in Chicago, Rockville, Maryland, and on Cape Cod in Massachusetts. They have five children, Robert III, 18; Maria, 16; Timothy, 12; Mark, 8, and Anthony, 7. Robert (Bobby) is at present in Jerusalem where he is participating in the filming of the musical "Jesus Christ Superstar."

But he will return to the U.S. tomorrow, summoned by his family after his father's appointment to the Democratic ticket.

Shriver visited Israel with his family last Christmas and is chairman of the International Patrons of the Israel Museum.

Estonian gets death for Nazi war crimes

MOSCOW (Reuter). — A court in the Soviet Baltic republic of Estonia has sentenced one man to death and two others to 15-year terms in labour camps for crimes they committed as wartime collaborators of the Nazis, "Pravda" reported yesterday.

The men, Herman Sikk, Kaarel Korboe and Ulo Ord, were found guilty by the Estonian Supreme Court of shooting civilians in the town of Kiviolli in 1941-2, when Estonia, annexed by the Soviet Union in 1940, was overrun by Hitler's armies.

Sikk also personally shot Estonian soldiers in 1944 for refusing to fight for the Germans, the newspaper said. Sikk was sentenced to death and his two companions to 15-year labour camp terms.

Mr. Peipert was visiting four Soviet Jews when police arrived. After being refused entry the police broke down the flat door.

He said all five were taken to a police station where they were photographed in a group. Mr. Peipert was then released and the four Jews — two from Moscow and two from Lithuania — were freed later in the evening.

Mr. Peipert, a non-Jewish U.S. citizen, said the police gave no reason for their action. Soviet newspapers last year accused him of being a Zionist agent.

Jordan paper attacks lure of Israel wages

AMMAN (AFP). — The Jordanian newspaper "Ar-Rai" yesterday denounced Israel's "high wages policy," which it said was aimed at undermining the "patriotic feeling of the Arabs in the occupied territories."

Addressing a talk to Arab workers, whom "the Israelis were attempting to lead astray with high wages," the newspaper asked: "Whom will the money benefit, if the citizen loses his honour — the principle basis of national sovereignty?"

'No change' in Greek-Arab relations

DAMASCUS (Reuter). — Greece officially denied on Saturday that American military aid to it was intended to provide protection for Israel, Foreign Ministry sources said here.

They said the denial was conveyed by Mr. Jean Tsoussi, the Greek Ambassador, who was commenting on President Nixon's reported remarks that "without aid to Greece and aid to Turkey, you have no viable policy to save Israel."

Mr. Tsoussi communicated a statement made by Greek alternate Foreign Minister Christian Kambouropoulos-Palamas in Athens on Saturday that there had been no change in the relations between Greece and the Arab countries, and that those friendly relations excluded any direct or indirect Greek participation in acts against the Arabs.

Mr. Tsoussi said the Athens statement was a denial that U.S. military aid was regarded by Greece as intended for an action against the interests of the Arab states.

Meanwhile, UPI reports from Athens that the first contingent of U.S. 6th Fleet families and personnel have arrived in the Greek capital in accordance with the recent U.S.-Greek agreement on home port facilities, but the controversy surrounding the issue continues.

Hanoi tanks launch drive in Cambodia

PHNOM PENH (AP). — Khmer and allied planes knocked out six tanks and damaged four others as Communist forces used armour for the first time in Cambodia and fighting raged along supply corridors used by North Vietnamese and Vietcong forces.

North Vietnamese forces also seized five hamlets near Hanoi yesterday and stopped a South Vietnamese drive in Quang Tri city with a heavy toll of government casualties.

The heaviest fighting was around the ruins of the town of Kompong Trabeak, 80 kms southeast of Phnom Penh on Highway 1, linking the Khmer capital to Saigon.

The armour — part of a contingent of at least 20 heavy Soviet-made tanks, according to one source — struck west of Kompong Trabeak where a stretch of between five to 10 kms. of highway was under Communist control.

The North Vietnamese reportedly have been massing thousands of troops on both sides of the Viet-Cambodia border since President Nguyen Van Thieu has predicted will be a new offensive in the delta in an attempt to isolate Saigon and put political pressure on the government.

A South Vietnamese marine battalion commander told Associated Press correspondent Holger Jensen in Quang Tri that he could not accomplish his mission of clearing North Vietnamese troops from the northernmost provincial capital unless the big Communist artillery guns are silenced.

Simultaneous with the conventional assaults, guerrilla allies of the North Vietnamese carried out a fresh series of sapper and terror attacks along the central and North-Vietnam's threatened western border coasts of South Vietnam under, pilots said.

Bottom of shaded area is where fighting has erupted in Cambodia.

what appears to be a stepped-up campaign. They hit at Cam Ranh Bay, near Qui Nhon and in the city of Da Nang.

By dusk, South Vietnamese militia troops backed by an armoured column and artillery had reoccupied one of the five hamlets in Phu Tan district, 46 kms. southeast of Hue, at the cost of apparent civilian casualties.

In the air war, U.S. Navy jets set ablaze a sprawling vehicle depot on the southern edges of Hanoi. Trieste blast may be joint Arab-Italian act

TRIESTE, Italy (Reuter). — Police are probing the theory that Italian extremists helped Arab terrorists blow up oil storage tanks here on Friday and escape over the border into Yugoslavia.

Firemen said yesterday that the flames at Trieste's Trans-Alpine oil pipeline terminal had been brought under control. Damage was estimated at $7m.

At least one of the saboteurs may have been killed when the powerful explosive charges set the tanks ablaze, they said. As a human body would be consumed in the 1,500-Centigrade temperature produced by the blazing oil, prospects of finding any trace of a victim were considered almost nil.

(The flash yesterday occurred the death of one of its top leaders, Yusef Sa'ad Shammal, who was said to have "died" in Europe, while the Saboteurs' press reports alleged that he had died of cancer, the Italian embassier said. Shammal's role in Saboteurs' activity, adding that he was a "great believer in revolutionary violence."

Shammal was also mentioned by the Falah-organized "Black September Organization" which claimed responsibility for the Trieste sabotage. It did not claim that Shammal was involved in the Trieste incident but noted that he was a "martyr of the Palestinian revolutionary fight against imperialism and Zionism.")

Police said they were concentrating on the possibility of a Palestinian terrorist attack. In Beirut on Saturday, the Black September group said it was responsible for the operation.

Police said it was probably helped by Italian extremists, as a detailed survey of the oil terminal, which contained 25 tanks divided into three separate areas, would have been necessary.

Police were looking for four Palestinian who stayed recently in small hotels in this northern Adriatic port.

Police have learned that immediately after the blasts a van and a car raced down the road from the terminal and headed for the nearby Yugoslav border.

Police believe the saboteur group must have consisted of at least two men and may have numbered as many as six.

The tanks form the Italian end of the Trans-Alpine oil pipeline which carried oil to West Germany and Austria. Police believe that if Palestinian terrorists attacked the oil terminal it might have been because they object to West German aid to Israel.

Indo-Pak generals to meet

RAWALPINDI (AP). — A Pakistan military spokesman said here yesterday that the first meeting of representatives of the Pakistani and Indian Chiefs of Staff will be held at Sushetgarh on the Indian side of the cease-fire line on Thursday.

Lt-Gen. Abdul Hamid Khan has been nominated to represent the Pakistan Army Chief of Staff. India will be represented by Lt-Gen. P.S. Bhagat.

The two officers will consider how to determine the actual line of control in Jammu and Kashmir resulting from the cease-fire of December 17, 1971. They will also consider other measures to reduce tensions in the area resulting from periodic violations of the cease-fire line in Jammu and Kashmir.

Catholics fight army in Belfast

BELFAST (UPI). — Angry Roman Catholics ripped down barbed wire and steel barricades and battled troops yesterday in the first large-scale rioting since the British security forces invaded Irish Republican strongholds in Northern Ireland last Monday.

The clash came when about 1,200 Catholic marchers protesting the British military presence in Belfast's Andersonstown district massed for a rally outside Roger Casement football park, now a fortified British army bastion. Then they charged into the field.

Squads of soldiers charged them with face visors down and batons flailing and firing rubber bullets. The rioters broke and fled. Two soldiers were injured.

The street battle followed a mine attack on a British armoured ambulance a few blocks from the scene, with the explosion injuring soldiers inside the vehicle only slightly but seriously wounding two Catholic civilian passersby.

50 die in India train crash

RAWALPINDI (UPI). — At least 50 persons were feared killed and 150 injured, 10 of them seriously, yesterday when the Karachi-bound "Texro" train rumbled into a goods train midway between Rawalpindi and Karachi, the official Associated Press of Pakistan said.

The accident occurred at midnight on Saturday in Lisqatpur railway station, about 480 kms. south of Rawalpindi and 445 km. north of Karachi. The crash was blamed on the pointsman who misdirected the Texro to the loop track where the goods train was standing.

After ouster from Uganda U.K. expects influx of Asians

LONDON (AP). — Britain braced yesterday for a possible flood of refugees from Uganda attempting to enter the United Kingdom legally. The government was reported planning urgent meetings today to discuss how to deal with the problem.

The crisis developed over the weekend after Uganda President Idi Amin gave 80,000 East African Asians holding British passports three months to leave the country.

Amin charged that the Asians — mostly of Indian origin and owning many shops and businesses — controlled most of Uganda's trade and were sabotaging Uganda's economy.

Britain, however, allows only a quota of 3,500 Asians to enter this country each year, and there is a long waiting list. Last week, a group of Indians from East Africa were shuttlecocked from airport to airport around the world after they were refused entry to Britain for attempting to jump the queue of immigrants. At least 80 Asians are in British detention camps.

There were fears that now huge numbers of alarmed Asians from Uganda may start heading for Britain with their families by any means possible, although many may elect to go to India.

Their entry into Britain — legally or illegally — is bound to add to this country's growing racial problem. A number of white groups are attempting to restrict even more than at present the influx of Indians, Pakistanis and natives of Caribbean countries holding British passports.

In law, Britain is entitled to refuse entry to any Asians who do not have specially-issued vouchers to enter. It is believed here that the actual numbers of Asians in Uganda is less than the 80,000 mentioned by Gen. Amin, but the problems of an unprecedented influx reportedly dismay British officials.

David Lane, Under-Secretary at the Home Office, gave an indication yesterday of the government's immediate reaction. "We are already a crowded island and immigration must and will remain strictly controlled," he said.

ARAB TERROR ACTIVITY SPREADS ON GERMAN SOIL

The Annual Report of the West Germany Office for State Security contains a chapter entitled "Invasive activities of foreign organizations." It begins: "As a consequence of the constant influx of alien workers into the Federal Republic, new possibilities offered themselves to the extremist organizations... among them the largest up of about 20,000 workers from Arab countries... In the past few years, the larger organizations of Palestinian resistance managed to consolidate and to win over a considerable part of the Palestinians living here."

Because of the apparent laxity of the Bonn authorities, West Germany has become a haven for Arab extremists. HERBERT FREEDEN reports that some of the most radical Arab groups, including Black September, organize their international terror activities from bases in Germany.

The Ministry of Interior official whom I was invited to discuss the question of Arabs in the Federal Republic said that all he could tell me was what was written in the report. He could not even give me the basic information as the names of Arab workers and students living in Germany.

It was only later that I understood that the Minister had given instructions not to reveal details of activities of Arab groups "as a situation gives rise to grave concern."

The Minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, told the Bundestag recently that he is confronted increasingly with security problems arising from the activities of radical, even terrorist, foreigners and their organizations... early as February 1970, therefore, I instructed the security services to exercise a careful watch within the framework of the law, at these extremist groups... The closing of their activities prevents judgments against foreigners which could lead to xenophobia.

While the German authorities are willing to disturb relations with some of them newly re-established with the Arab states, it is obvious that they do not intend to ax the "careful watch" they say being kept on the foreign extremist groups in the Republic.

If one adds to the 20,000 Arab workers the 16,000 students from Arab countries registered at German universities (though many of them have not taken up their studies) the number of 36,000 Arabs in the Federal Republic exceeds that of German Jews by 10,000. Among these are 3,000 "Palestinians" who are overwhelmingly classified as "radicals." Many more "Palestinians" are entering Germany illegally, others are seeking "political asylum." Especially volatile is a situation in Berlin, where every month some 200 "Palestinians" are said to filter in, mostly young people, air-ferried from Syria, Lebanon and Jordan to the East Berlin airport, Schoeneberg. Most of them long to a movement called "Victims of the Israeli Occupation" and cause of their illegal status, are one to being blacklisted into criminal activities.

The number of extremist foreign organizations in the Federal Republic doubled in 1971 compared with the previous year — from 100 with 1,000 members to 220 with 60,000 members. Forty-seven of these groups work clandestinely and have "terrorist tendencies." At present, 16 Arab organizations are active in West Germany, comprising 110 groups: General Union of Palestinian Students (27 branches); General Union of Palestinian Workers (24 branches); Fatah (23 branches); society of Arab Students (15 branches); Arab Students Federation (11 branches); Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (P.F.L.P.—7 groups); Union of Libyan Students; Popular Front for the Liberation of the Occupied Territories; and an anti-monarchist group of Moroccans, the "National Confederation."

Of 152 acts of terrorism by foreign organizations in 1970, 49 were committed by Arab groups. Of these the General Union of Palestinian Students and the General Union of Palestinian Workers have the numerically strongest bases of the "Palestinian resistance" on German soil. The headquarters of the two organizations, which hide their true designs from the German authorities, are in Cairo. The Students' Union is headed by Fatah and almost all its functions occupy leading positions in the movement. The activities of the Workers' Union, which has been operating in Germany since 1969, are shrouded in even greater secrecy. Although there, too, Fatah has some influence the majority of its groups are under the sway of the P.F.L.P.

Fatah contacts
Fatah, in addition to its 23 branches, maintains contacts in another 10 German cities. Each member gets a number and code name, must swear unconditional allegiance and absolute secrecy, and cannot leave the organization. No one is allowed to know more than his immediate assignment requires. Financed to a large extent by the Arab League, the Arab organizations in the Federal Republic solicit volunteers for training in the Middle East in underground and terror activities. Members of the German "New Left" also travel to the Middle East for training courses, and there is a certain amount of cooperation between the radical Arab organizations and groups of the German "New Left," especially in student circles.

There were contacts with the Baader-Meinhof Gang, and not only on the ideological plane. In 1969

British lords own tenth of land
LONDON (AP) — Britain's lords and ladies own almost one-tenth of the total land in the British Isles — but nevertheless, they are "very modest" about their possessions.

The Countess of Sutherland complains that she is down to her "last 160,000 acres," says Andrew Roth, the author of "Lord of the Board." The book says that the stakes which British peers have in British industry and commerce makes the business connections of lowly members of the House of Commons pale into insignificance.

"Peers," says Mr. Roth, "make Members of Parliament look like barrow boys" — a reference to the fast-disappearing breed of fruit and fish sellers who push their carts, or barrows, around London.

Mr. Roth estimates that there are 60 millionaires in the 1,060-man House of Lords — probably 20 times the number of similarly wealthy men in the Commons.

AT THE OLYMPICS Form doesn't always tell

By DEBRA MARKUS
Asian Games and Maccabi champion and athletics coach at Hebrew University

It is impossible to predict results at the Olympic Games. Many factors can make forecasts prove foolish: it is useless to rely on analyses of form.

One of the biggest problems of athletes is to be at their very best at the time when competition is fiercest, as during the Olympic Games. Peak condition for maximum potential output can last up to 10 days, after which performance can drop rapidly. Such peaks can be reached twice or three times a year, depending on the strength of the athlete.

Peak performance involves bettering a former personal best performance, and this generally is a developing process, the athlete doing better and better. Occasionally an athlete pulls off some freak achievement. For example, Bob Beaman who normally jumps 8.30 metres suddenly jumped 8.90 in Mexico City four years ago. He has never gone near this mark since, and neither has anyone else. It is possible that the freak conditions of altitude might have played some tricks!

Usually an athlete has the problem of reaching a peak effort four to six weeks before the Games to make his country's team. Then he either has to hold his form or drop it, only to rebuild it some 10-14 days before the big event.

This explains why so often the "outsider" succeeds. His qualifying effort was obviously not a peak performance, others may have broken records in the process of making their teams, while the one just making the team could be the one to hit the headlines.

What general trend might we expect from these Olympics? It looks as if the Americans are going to dominate the sprints, but they may well find a little Russian (reported to have done 9.8 seconds) a serious challenge. The rise of the Finns and the improved British level of middle distance running could get these countries long-sought medals, but the East Germans are an unknown quantity, with reports of great talent in their team. Their natural desire for prestige so close to home is going to do much for their fighting spirit.

Russians medals
The Russians have been very mediocre over the past two Olympics having relied too long on old stars, but they are certainly capable of bringing back medals for the field events, the weightlifting, boxing and wrestling.

The Americans seem to face no challenge for the first three medals in the pole-vaulting — they have three men able to clear over 15 ft. But here the East and West Germans could pull off a surprise, being near this mark themselves.

In the women's events, we should see the Australian and American girls compete for the sprints with the Europeans and Iron Curtain countries dominating the field and distance events.

The hurdles could have witnessed our first Israel success, as Esther Shachamorov's earlier season time of 13.4 would put her in the running at least for the finals in the 100 metres hurdles — but her performances have been on the decline lately. The Japanese threaten the American and Australian monopoly on the swimming titles.

The Russians and other Iron Curtain countries should push the Americans out of any big medal haul in gymnastics.

J.K. dockers cut vital supplies to islands

LDON (UPI). — Striking dockers cut essential supplies to the remote Orkney and Shetland islands yesterday in a dispute over social security benefits for families.

A mass meeting in Liverpool on the 10th day of their strike, dockers voted for a protest today, against what they call treatment of officials of the Government of Social Security.

The protest was the latest in a series of actions by the dockers in the remote Orkney and Shetland islands off the north coast of Scotland.

Dockers voted on Saturday to handle food and fuel supplies to the islands because of security officials ruled the quantities they carried would be deducted from the benefits their men and children are eligible for. The men had said they would accept any wages they earned to end the most immediate shortage on the islands is food for livestock, only three days' supply remaining.

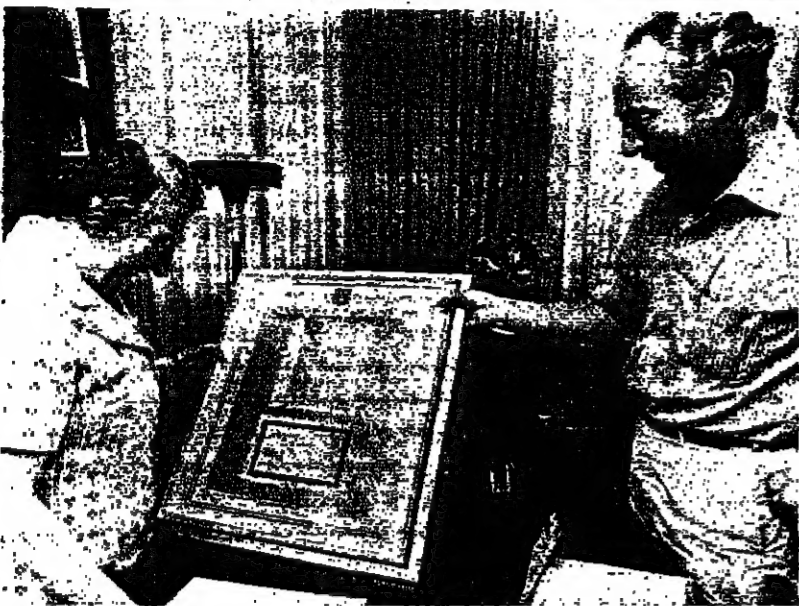

Shipments to other islands continued, but one speaker at the Liverpool rally said supplies to the Isle of Man, off Britain's west coast, might be cut.

The dockers are also demanding that they be eligible for social security benefits for the first week they return to work.

Government and union leaders were pessimistic about the immediate prospects for settling the strike by 41,000 dockers. At least 185 ships are now idle in harbour or at anchor waiting to be unloaded.

"We are not making the progress we hoped would have been made," Jack Jones of the dockers' union said in a radio interview on Saturday. "It's too early to be optimistic."

He and Lord Aldington, Chairman of the Port of London Authority, have been working together to encourage the dockers to accept a settlement which guarantees that the growth of containerization will not take their jobs away. Dockers voted to strike after rejecting the settlement.

The Minister Golda Meir yesterday got her first look at Israel's 25th anniversary stamp, displayed by Communications Minister Moshe Peres.

Stamp service earns IL11,300m.

Minister of Communications Shimon Peres revealed yesterday that revenue from the Philatelic Service last year amounted to IL11,300 million, a 10 per cent increase from the year before.

The Philatelic Service has 40,000 subscribers in Israel and 10,000 abroad, as well as 14 agencies all over the world.

Peres also said that this year's Philatelic Service will begin in August, among other things, a series of 12 stamps of the Chagall windows, and a series of three children's drawings.

Peres gave this report in presenting a stamp marking the 25th anniversary of the establishment of the State to the Prime Minister at a meeting in her office.

Haifa port busy as Ashdod strikes

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — The port here is experiencing an unusually heavy work week for the summer, because of the diversion of freighters from Ashdod port where a go-slow strike is being held.

All stevedores not on annual leave were fully employed yesterday, with 54 gangs working in two shifts, to unload 18 cargo ships. Two daily loaded freighters arrived from Ashdod and two others which were to sail to Ashdod with the portion of cargo consigned to the southern region, remained and unloaded their cargo here.

Israel meets the DC-10

By GEORGE LEONOF
Jerusalem Post Aviation Correspondent

The McDonnell Douglas Corporation yesterday introduced Israel to its new wide-cabin tri-jet airliner, the DC-10, billed as the last word in commercial aviation technology. The demonstration plane, named "Friendship 72," is on a globe-trotting, Mohammed-to-Mount Sinai sort of tour of countries in three continents whose aviation authorities have not had an opportunity to inspect the DC-10 at its Long Beach, California, base.

Douglas President Jackson McGowan, who heads the 35-man team on the world tour, said the 25-day journey to 26 cities was made in response to requests from countries "where the advanced characteristics of the DC-10 are not as well known as they are in the U.S. People want to know, for instance, how quiet it really is — both inside for passengers and outside for the communities it overflies."

As far as "inside" information goes, the 180 guests invited to yesterday's demonstration out of Lod had ample opportunity to judge for themselves on an hour's flight which looped around Cyprus and flew over Jerusalem on the way back.

Once the luxurious 55-metre airship leveled off from its unusually steep 18-degree takeoff, the passengers were encouraged to wander at will through the three compartments, containing a total of 250 first and tourist class seats, with a conference room in the centre. (An all-tourist class model can seat 380.) Movement along the two aisles running the length of the cabin proved to be smooth, despite the added pedestrian traffic of hostesses — provided courtesy of El Al — bearing refreshments.

The aisles are appreciably wider than in both the DC-8, phased out of production, and the Boeing 707, though not as spacious as the Jumbo aisles. They comfortably divide the nine-abreast seats (eight in first class) and overhead individual luggage compartments offer untrammelled leg-room, as in the Boeing 747. Another similarity is the ceiling height, which at 2.40 metres yields practically nothing to the average shlemel.

Douglas publicity handouts present the DC-10 as a "good neighbour" plane which "enters and leaves airport areas with scarcely more than a polite hum and a whoosh... and without even a wisp of smoke." In fact, even straining at the takers, the aircraft's three 40,000-lb.-thrust engines, produced by General Electric, performed with a powerful but subdued purr, and even the rear of the cabin, under the engine installed above the aft fuselage, allowed conversation in normal tones.

Mr. McGowan revealed that the Japanese, skeptical of Douglas claims, built a number of ground checkpoints along a predetermined demonstration route flown by "Friendship 72" and found the plane's performance complied with the publicity build-up.

The DC-10, which cruises at 960 kph, is expected to fill the need for airlines which require planes larger than the conventional four-engine jets but who are unable fully to exploit the Jumbo jet's giant capacity. Since the plane's maiden flight just two years ago, 25 airlines — 16 of them outside the U.S. — have ordered a total of 230 of the aircraft, and 42 are already in service. Douglas Vice-President (marketing) Charles Forsyth told The Jerusalem Post yesterday that Lod Airport should see the DC-10 landing regularly by the end of next year.

As far as El Al is concerned, the DC-10 is not an immediate prospect. The Israel national carrier expects to take delivery of its third Jumbo by mid-1973. El Al's managing director, Mordechai Ben-Ari, a guest on yesterday's flight along with the chairman of its board, Moshe Carmel, told The Post yesterday that the new Douglas, even for the more distant future, was not considered as a substitute for the Boeing 747, though a modified version could conceivably be an alternative to the 707 by the end of 1975.

The DC-10 is designed for service on routes of between 500 and 7,000 kms. But two intercontinental versions will be then be available, each with a range of over 9,500 kms, using either G.E. or Pratt and Whitney engines.

Real business slump unlikely Building anarchy growing

By MOSHE ATEE
Jerusalem Post Economic Editor

AFTER unprecedented expansion, the building industry is now poised between boom and slump. In the first quarter of 1972, building starts were seven per cent less than the preceding quarter, which had already shown a downward trend. The decline probably gained momentum because of the slowdown in sales reported by most contractors in recent months. There has been a drop in sales to foreign buyers, and less pressure from the local public.

Nevertheless, the industry remains confident, and most contractors agree with Labour Minister Yosef Almog that cyclical ups and downs in construction are not necessarily more marked than in other branches of the economy. They believe that because building has always been a pointer for the Israel economy, a real decline on the eve of elections is unlikely.

The public is also warned not to overestimate the importance of fluctuations in the demand for flats. Last year non-residential construction accounted for one-quarter of total building starts, a greater proportion than in previous years. Moreover, one-third of the building activity is not only financed, but actually promoted by the Government, which can always step in should it find it necessary to prop up or supplement faltering private building. Already, a flat at reduced cost is provided for every third young couple. Such programmes could easily be expanded, or similar ones be launched for slum dwellers, etc.

But while we need not worry about the volume of construction, with all it involves in terms of employment, earnings, and the provision of more flats, this does not mean that there is any progress in solving the industry's problems. Quite the contrary. The bigger the building boom, the less manageable the problems are likely to become. However, both the public and the authorities are mainly concerned with the quantitative aspects: constructing more houses; getting more funds to finance them; acquiring most up-to-date equipment in order to speed up construction and importing workers because of the local labour shortage, while little attention is paid to crucial structural and qualitative elements.

SHORTAGE OF PLOTS

A case in point is the alleged shortage of building plots in the major cities, which is popularly blamed for much of the rise in price of flats. In order to counter this, the sale of government land, and other far-reaching measures have been suggested. But little has been said about the failure to implement the slum clearance law, which could have provided, at the same time, urban land in neighbourhoods close to town centres, and attractive financial facilities, quite apart from helping to solve a sore social problem.

When the law was passed eight years ago, it was hailed as a major social achievement, indeed as an election promise, too good and too costly to be carried out. But the real reason it was not implemented was that the authorities did not dare proceed firmly against the speculation in land property. The law providing for the clearance of slums in order to build modern high-rise housing estates, the present tenants to be compensated with flats either in the same blocks or elsewhere. The snag is, however, that the present tenants — though mostly squatters — insist on getting a share in the inflated value of the land.

Though several court actions have been started, and a number of forcible evictions attempted, the law has by and large remained a dead letter. Meanwhile, hip service is paid to slum clearance by launching new, and even more costly schemes while the slum areas remain closed to urban development.

LAW FLOPS

Not very different has been the fate of a law passed two years ago with the intention of subjecting the business of building contractors to public control. The contractors themselves requested it in order to prevent abuses. Only contractors meeting minimum requirements as regards capital, professional standards and record of performance were granted licences.

It is now openly admitted that this law has been a flop, with licensing little more than a formality. Following the Pan-Loon shock, the Contractors' Centre is now talking of introducing a voluntary code of conduct for its members, which is of course a far cry from effective control of the entire industry.

It goes without saying that private contractors were interested in licensing mainly in order to impede the entry of new competitors. This they failed to achieve. But the public could be protected without licensing by the introduction of legal standards for building contracts. At present, people wishing to buy a flat are more or less at the contractor's mercy, not knowing exactly what he is responsible for.

PREFABS HELP

It goes without saying that standardization and quality checks in housing involve many problems and some costs, and cannot be achieved overnight. It is also true that, by and large, the quality of building has improved considerably, and that prefabricated building components are beginning to make themselves felt (particularly in low-cost housing). But that is hardly an excuse for the present anarchy, which cannot but handicap any sensible building policy.

None of the above examples touches on the economy of building. They refer merely to technicalities. But until these are cleared up, the effective planning of the building industry is impossible. Moreover, other technicalities on which the building industry vitally depends are in no better state. Land registration — which is the basis for all mortgage credits — is now worse than under the British Mandate, and is progressively deteriorating. The administrative machinery of urban planning and municipal control of building activity is at best creaking, and in some cases is nothing short of scandalous. The obsession with record figures of built floor-area allows both the authorities and the public to ignore many pressing issues.

High school computer age

By SARAH HONIG
Jerusalem Post Reporter

RAMAT GAN. — The computer age will reach the Israeli secondary school system in the next school year, when two high schools here will be connected to the Bar-Ilan University Computer Centre.

This will be done as part of an experimental teaching project co-sponsored by the Computer Centre and the University's School of Education.

The hook-up will be made through Post Office telephone cables. The aim is to promote the use of the computer in the teaching of a number of subjects to third-year high school students.

Computer terminals will be installed in the Municipal Religious High School here, and at the Nechalim Yeshiva high school.

A University team will supervise the project and keep check on the pupils' progress. Comparisons will be made to see whether the innovations in teaching methods involving such ultra-modern aids will indeed raise the general achievement levels of the pupils.

The supervisory team has drawn up study programmes for teachers specialising in subjects in which the computer will be utilized. The teachers are now taking part in an intensive seven-week study programme.

It is expected that the first third of the coming school year will be spent on getting the students acquainted with the computers, and afterwards they will begin running their own programmes through the students will also be given access to the Computer Centre for necessary work.

This project was made possible by the expansion of the computer's memory storage capacity by some 300 per cent. Twenty-four terminals are now connected to the Computer Centre, and following the recent expansion, the terminal system can work for 24 hours a day. The University will foot the bill for the project, covering, among others, the costs of drawing up special teachers' study programmes, terminal installation and computer time. The monthly rental for one line is a basic IL2,000, which does not include the cost of actual use. The University is currently negotiating with the Ministry of Communications for a lower tariff for the project, arguing that it is purely educational.

The number of computers operating in Israel increased by 32 per cent last year over 1970, according to statistics released by the Central Bureau of Statistics. The figures showed that 237 computers were in use at the end of 1971 compared with 194 at the end of 1970.

Soviet expands auto plant

MOSCOW (AP). — The third and last of the Soviet Union's huge new auto plant at Togliatti began operation August 4 and is turning out a sedan called the Vaz 2103, Soviet newspapers reported yesterday.

The paper "Sotsialisticheskaya Industriya" (Socialist Industry) said that the new assembly line, almost two kilometres long, is designed to produce 220,000 cars per year.

This is also the capacity of each of the other two lines. With all three lines in operation, the plant is expected to turn out 600,000 autos per year.

The sprawling complex, on the Volga River about 475 kilometres southeast of Moscow, is virtually self-contained and produces everything from engine blocks to windshields in separate plants surrounding the assembly conveyors.

The Italian auto firm Fiat provided technical and financial assistance for the plant's design and construction.

The plant began turning out the Zhiguli, or Vaz 2101, in September 1970. It produced 172,000 Zhigulis, modeled after the Fiat 124, in 1971. The second assembly line went into operation in January and began turning out Vaz 2101s, or Zhiguli station wagons.

The Zhiguli is named for a low range of mountains near the auto plant. Vaz are the Russian initials for the Volga automobile plant. The boom town Togliatti is named for Palmiro Togliatti, founder of the Italian Communist Party who died in 1964.

"Pravda" said the car being produced by the third assembly line, the 2103, is heavier, longer, roomier and more comfortable than the Zhiguli. It has a 75-horsepower engine and a top speed of 150 kilometres per hour.
